Suicide Try Fails In Niles Railroad Yards

A man giving his name as John Smith failed in a suicide attempt last week in the Niles railroad yards when he was only knocked unconscious as he was struck by the trucks of a freight train. It is thought the man misjudged his leap in an effort to throw himself beneath the wheels of the train.

YEAR'S TIME GIVEN RAILROAD FOR NEW LINE

Request of the Western Pacific California railroad for a year's extension of time for construction of its projected Niles-Redwood City-San Francisco line was granted last week by the interstate commerce commission at Washington, D. C.

Economic conditions making it difficult to promote the sale of bonds for the project were the reasons given by the carrier for its request. Beginning of construction work on the line will not begin until 1933 now that the application has been granted.

The Western California railroad is a subsidiary of the Western Pacific.

Alameda Creek Has Heavy Flow of Water After Downpour

Flooding thousands of acres of farm land in Washington township, swelling creeks to overflowing proportions, and causing slides which necessitated the closing of roads were some of the consequences of the torrential rains which greeted Niles and surrounding community over the Christmas holidays.

The heavy downpour brought the total rainfall by Wednesday morning of this week up to 12.35 inches, acording to the rain gauge kept by Southern Pacific officials at Niles. This is considerably over that of last year when the total rainfall all season was 11.81.

Much of this year's precipatation fell since December 21. Up to 6 o'clock Monday morning, a total of 6.31 inches had fallen since last Monday. On Thursday, December 24, the heaviest rain of the season fell, when a total of 2.02 inches were recorded.

The Niles Canyon road was closed to traffic Sunday and Monday due to slides caused by the heavy rain. Large boulders were loosened and kept falling onto the highway, making it hazardous for motorists to travel. Those who intended to drive up Niles Canyon from Niles were forced to go to Hayward and travel up through Dublin Canyon in order to reach their destination.

All Southern Pacific trains between Oakland and San Jose were rerouted through Niles Monday, because of floods on the southbay shore between Alvarado and Russell City. A slide on the Southern Pacific tracks in Niles Canyon was cleared away without interruption of service.

The Mission San Jose-Sunol road also was closed to traffic because of slides.

A heavy stream of water was running in Alameda creek Monday morning, the first heavy flow of the season. At the steel railroad bridge in Niles Canyon the water was almost at level with the road. The creek at Machado's Corners near Alvarado was swollen by the rains.

Thousands of acres of farm land were inundated in the Alvarado section over the week-end. Ranch-

Niles Man Faced With Manslaughter After Auto Death

Leland S. Stivers At Liberty On Thousand Dollar Bail

Facing a charge of manslaughter, Leland S. Stivers, well known Niles resident, is at liberty under $1000 bail after his car struck and killed Joseph Fernandes, 48, of Niles road, near his home south of Hayward city limits early Thursday evening.

Stivers claims Fernandes was on the wrong side of the road and that he failed to see the man until his car struck and knocked him to the pavement. Fernandes died shortly following the accident at the Hayward hospital. After an autopsy performed by Dr. N. N. Ashley, county autopsy surgeon, it was announced that he died of a ruptured liver and bladder.

Stivers was arrested after the tragedy and charged Saturday with manslaughter in a complaint signed by George Barron, of the state highway patrol. Barron and Policeman Al. C. August investigated the accident.

After posting a $1000 bail, Stivers was released Saturday morning. An inquest into Fernandes' death was held Wednesday morning in Hayward with Deputy Coroner Walter Flierl in charge. Stivers was scheduled to appear before Justice Jacob Harder, Jr., Wednesday afternoon for preliminary hearing on manslaughter charges.

THREE ALVARADO MEXICANS BEAT UP OFFICER AND FLEE

Trio Arraigned In Centerville Court On Tuesday

When Night Patrolman Bates, of Alvarado, attempted to arrest Valdermo Gonsales, in front of a Mexican pool hall in Alvarado early Christmas morning, two other Mexicans, Tony Quirioz and Carlos Ramirez, came to their friend's aid, administered a beating to Bates and escaped with the prisoner.

After an alleged rumpus in the poolhall, Bates had investigated and when he had asked Gonsales if he was carryng a gun, the Mexican pulled it on the officer. After Bates had deprived him of the weapon, the prisoner's friends appeared on the scene.

A warrant was sworn out for the trio and Constable Tom Silva, of Centerville, made the arrest Monday afternoon. The three Mexicans were arraigned Tuesday afternoon in the Centerville justice court before Judge Allen G. Norris. Gonsalves was charged with alien possession of firearms, while the other two were charged with aiding in the escape of a prisoner. Two other Mexicans said to have been involved in the affair escaped without being identified.

The Men's Club contributed the money made at their annual Xmas jinx held earlier in the month toward financing the party and tree.

The hall was decorated by Welfare members and by members of the Washington legion post.

CALIFORNIA PAINED

THE ATTITUDE of Hiram Johnson in fighting the president on world peace and disarmament is far from popular. His demand that Hoover refuse a re-nomination is silly in the extreme. It is bombast, to be entirely frank.

With the world weighted down with taxation, and groping as best it can for means to slash the cost of governments, it would seem that any intelligent man, even though he might be soured by failure to attain the heights of his political ambitions, would give his support to measures to that end.

Johnson has disappointed many of his former admirers, one of whom is the writer. Opposing the League of Nations, disarmament and any kind of mediation between this nation and foreign governments, he alienates the best thought of the world from what was once a very sincere regard for progressive principles enunciated by the California senator. He throws away a brilliant record as governor through a desire to wreak vengeance upon a man whom he believes, however erroneously, stole the presidency from his grasp.

The presence in America in recent months of foreign potentates to discuss problems in which every nation shares alike in personal interests, is a

HAYWARD MAN IS HURT WHEN STRUCK BY DECOTO AUTO

Receives Serious Injuries When Hit By Door Handle

Lawrence Moll, of Hayward, was seriously injured last Thursday when he was struck by a car driven by Carl Clausen, of Decoto, opposite the Sycamore street store in Hayward.

Moll's injuries included a possible fracture of the skull, a cut on the lower lip requiring six stitches to close, a cut below the left eye, and injuries to legs and arms.

Moll was crossing the street and had his attention distracted by another car so he apparently did not notice Clausen approaching. Clausen swerved his machine in an attempt to avoid striking the pedestrain but Moll was struck by the right handle of the door as the car passed him and knocked to the street.

At latest reports, Moll is reported to be recovering at the Hayward hospital.

ALVARADO MAN IS FINED $20 IN NILES COURT

Frank Vargas, of Alvarado, was fined $20 in the Niles justice court Tuesday afternoon by Judge J. A. Silva on charges of disturbing the peace.

Ticket Sale Proceeds Will Go to Hospital and Welfare Tots

At a colorful affair for the disposal of the attractive Toyon branch of the Children's Hospital Christmas display in a Niles market last Wednesday morning, Mrs. Robinson, of Newark, was awarded the doll house and the small Christmas tree, while H. L. Scott, of Niles, won the large tree and cactus display contributed by the Thomas Cactus Gardens, of Decoto. Approximately fifty persons were present at the event.

Sale of tickets for the display were fairly successful, according to Toyon branch officials. At a meeting of the Toyon branch held Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. E. Thane in Niles, announcement was made that half of the proceeds gained from the sale will go toward the Children's Hospital in Oakland, while the other half will be used in caring for Welfare children in Southern Alameda county, which is under the charge of Mrs. P. If baby has COLIC

A CRY in the night. Colic! No cause for alarm if Castoria is handy. This pure vegetable preparation brings quick comfort, and can never harm. It is the sensible thing when children are ailing. Whether it's the stomach, or the little bowels; colic or constipation; or diarrhea. When tiny tongues are coated, or the breath is bad. Whenever there's need of gentle regulation. Children love the taste of Castoria, and its mildness makes it safe for frequent use.

And a more liberal dose of Castoria is always better for growing children than strong medicine meant only for adult use.

harbinger of a better understanding of peoples who, seemingly for commercial reasons, stand glaring across an imaginary boundary line armed to the teeth, with eyes strained for a movement to the hip that they may draw first.

The attitude of the provincial press, and mass of people who would build a Chinese wall around America, has been responsible for our aloofness at the meetings of the League of Nations in its attempt to settle the Manchurian dispute. With the United States as a member and acting in concert at Paris with members of that body, Japan would have been awed into withdrawing immediately from Chinese territory. Even though we stand on the sidelines while the league meets, that body will eventually win a victory for peace.

The war god dies hard. But he is dying. The swan song sung by Johnson brings no honor to the state that has so often been kind to him, and for posterity another character thought to be of pure gold, turns out to have feet of clay.

JIMMY HOLDS THE BAG

OUR prognostications were all wrong. Rolph disappointed us and at the same time double-crossed his erstwhile pal, Mayor Jimmie Walker. He let Mooney rot away in jail on Christmas day and it now looks like that celebrated prisoner will find San Quentin his St. Helena.

A kindly man at heart, the governor derives great pleasure in making the world happy. It is a virtue that has often been a weakness in his political career. The plea for the release of Mooney troubled his sleep, and when he couldn't stand it longer he sent east for his friend, His Honor, Jimmie Walker, showman and mayor. He thought to escape the flood of censure that he knew would surely follow a pardon of the alleged bomber, and devised to let the blame fall on the narrow but happy shoulders of his friend from New York. It looked easy and feasible. It appeared a clever piece of politics, and a means of stopping the Mooney din in his ears. On the face of it, it was all right. Walker got out here, and the storm broke. Powerful financial groups in San Francisco probably got the ear of the governor and did a lot of threatening, Rolph got scared, and stalled. He left Boisterous Jimmie in a very uncomfortable position, and the political prognosticators, like ourselves, dazed at their own stupidity in believing that we had in the governor's chair a man of parts.

FAIL TO PAY FINE BRINGS JAIL SENTENCE

Theodore Pestana, of Oakland, found to his dismay that it does not pay to attempt to evade a traffic citation, when he was sentenced to two days in the county jail in the Niles justice court Tuesday afternoon by Judge J. A. Silva for failure to pay a fine for a traffic offense.

Pestana was arrested early in November for driving on the wrong side of the road, and when he appeared in court was fined. Judge Silva continued the case when the youth said he had no money with which to pay the fine. Pestana repeatedly failed to appear, so a warrant was issued for his arrest last week. He was brought from Oakland Tuesday and received the jail sentence.

Another highlight of the gathering will be the presence of Miss Mary Barmby, of the county library, and all local branch librarians and the art class of the Washington Union high school as guests to hear Miss Taylor.

Corey will discuss libel and Kelly will discuss fires on a program, the theme of which has been announced by John B. Long, general manager of the newspaper organization, as "Protection of the Press."

Corey represents the Employers Reinsurance Company, which has just launched into the unchartered field of libel insurance. Kelly is president of the Board of Fire Underwriters of the Pacific Coast.

Round tables of newspaper problems—one of the weekly field and one for the daily field—will be held the first day of the convention.

General sessions will be held the second day, including the executive meeting, at which committees will report and officers and board for the new year elected. That evening the annual banquet will be held at which Governor Rolph and Lieutenant Governor Merriman will be the guests of honor.

The final day of the convention will be given over to winter sports in the San Bernardino mountains. More than 350 of the progressive weekly and daily newspapers of California will be represented at the meetings.

The Township Register is an active member of the California Newspaper Publishers' Association, and Mr. and Mrs. Norman H. Parks plan on attending the convention in the southern city in January.

ST. JAMES SUNDAY SCHOOL HOLDS PROGRAM

The St. James Sunday school party held last Wednesday was well attended in spite of the storm, and everyone had a jolly time. A lovely Christmas tree added to the occasion, and Santa Claus appeared in costume to delight the children by delivering presents, candy and oranges.

The assemblage joined in community singing. After the propram the floor was cleared for games which were enjoyed so much by the children that it was difficult to make them realize the hour was getting late.

Much credit should be given to Reverend and Mrs. Atwood who planned the program, to Arwin Ormsby who took charge of the games, and to Mrs. George Mathiesen who led the singing.

TIP SUPPLIED FOR DISCOVERING CAR SERIAL NUMERAL

Difficulty Made Easier by Calling at Hayward Office

Difficulties of Alameda county motorists in locating the serial number of their cars, which is required in applying for the 1932 license plates, were somewhat lightened last week when Captain L. A. Eike, of the state highway patrol, supplied a tip which will enable the motorists to locate their number without a great deal of trouble.

The new regulation had forced many car owners to search diligently within the dark and dirty recesses of the chassis in an effort to find the number, while others have hired garage mechanics to perfom the disagreeable work.

The numbers are located in different places on the various makes of cars and it would not be practical to publish a complete list of their locations in various cars, but the information is on file in the office of the highway patrol in Hayward, according to the traffic officer. Those wanting to find the numbers may call the Hayward office and give the make of their machine and the year model and they will be told where they can find the required numerals.

AMADOR C TEAM PUT TO ROUT BY CROCKETT FIVE

Lack of Practice Responsible for Utter Defeat of Don Cagers

Pleasanton A B and C basketball teams were defeated by the Crockett basketeers in three games played at the Amador High school gym last Friday night with a large number of points scored against the Dons.

The Dons were unprepared for this game and when asked to play with the Crockett teams last Wednesday afternoon the Dons had a hard battle before them.

The C team having disbanded after their league season, were the most unfortunate. Their practice has been mainly on the touch-tackle football push. They have not handled a basketball for several weeks. This lack of practice was evident in the manner in which they missed easy shots. The Crockett C team was a fast and sure shooting aggregation and they succeeded in scoring 24 points, while the Don Babes scored but one.

The high point man in the Crockett team was Mutt, who scored thirteen to his credit, while Anderson, Don center, scored the one point for the Dons.

The Dons' lineup was Anderson, center; Morgan and Reimers, forwards; Buttner and Abrott, guards.

SUNOL ROBBER TO BE TRIED BY SUPERIOR COURT

Colored Billy Brown Brought Before Judge C. A. Gale for Hearing

Billy Brown, colored, who broke into a Sunol home December 13, was held to answer to the Superior Court when he appeared before Judge Charles A. Gale, of Pleasanton, last Tuesday morning for his preliminary hearing.

Brown broke into and ransacked the house of Dan McLaughlin, of Sunol, in the early hours of the morning of Sunday, December 13. He was caught by Constable Al Vervais, Pleasanton officer, in the act of leaving the house with a saxaphone under his arm.

Vervais brought him to the Pleasanton jail to be held for investigation. Following burglary charges, pressed by McLaughlin, Brown was arraigned before Judge Gale and his preliminary hearing set for last Tuesday.

The accused has now been transferred to the county jail at Oakland to await trial before the higher court on the felony charge.

AMADOR VARSITY IS DEFEATED BY CROCKETT FIVE

Pleasanton high hoopsters were defeated by the Crockett varsity in a well and hard played game on December 18, by a score of twenty-one to thirteen. The contest was staged at Pleasanton.

Shortly after the game had started, both teams scored on long field goals. The long shot for the Dons was scored by Joe Miller, guard. Both teams battled desperately, and gradually the Crockett cagers forged ahead. At the half the score stood thirteen to seven with the Dons on the short end.

In the second half the Dons managed to close the gap till they were trailing only two points. Long distance shooting caused the Dons to lose possession of the ball and placed the Crockett boys in a position to do more scoring. The game speeded up toward the end with the Dons continually missing their attempted long shots and the visitors successfully increasing their lead.

Bob Silva was high point man for Pleasanton with six points to his credit. Bill Clark followed him closely with five, and Joe Miller scored two with his nice long shot from deep center.

The lineup was as follows: Bob Silva and Bill Clark, forwards; Bill Cole, center; Joe Miller and John Garibaldi, guards.

ALVARADO WEEKLY NEWS

Safe Driving Program To Be Inaugurated In Township

Safety on the streets and highways of Washington township will be one of the main planks in the platform of this township's progress during 1932.

Mayors of great cities today have issued a New Year's proclamation calling upon every citizen to cooperate in the program of safe, sane and courteous driving. "No deaths, no injuries resulting from automobile accidents" is the slogan suggested.

The proclamation reads as follows:

"The great economic attributes of the automobile can never compensate for the havoc in death and injury which is laid at its door. Approximately 20,000 have been killed and one quarter of a million men, women and children injured to date in California, primarily through carelessness and lack of courtesy on the part of drivers and pedestrians. The figures for the nation are staggering, being more than ten fold the number of those killed in California.

"We have been asked to cooperate with the Safety Conference of the California State Chamber of Commerce in making an intensive drive during this new year to bring about a proper understanding of courtesy between pedestrian and driver, and to eliminate tendencies toward reckless and careless driving.

"We of Washington township do proclaim our intent to help our officials and our government to use every means possible to make our streets safe and eliminate deaths and injuries by automobile, and call upon every citizen to cooperate in this great humanitarian effort."

The Safety Conference of the State Chamber of Commerce is dividing its 1932 campaign into twelve months of safety effort. January is "brake" month. The State Chamber of Commerce has asked the assistance of all official agencies, such as the police, state motor patrol, and judiciary, to carry on two weeks of warning and education, the last half of the month to be devoted to strict enforcement.

When PAIN Comes

WHAT many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes the acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water neutralizes instantly many times that much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

MAN NOW CAN THROW VOICE 200 MILES INTO ATMOSPHERE

"Sky-waves," rivalling Arabian tales, will be shot 200 miles high against the surface of an upper atmosphere known as the "heaviside layer," above the ocean between America and Hawaii, then caromed down to Honolulu—all in the flicker of an eyelash—when the human voice is carried by trans-Pacific radiotelephone service, opening early next month.

Electric waves will be "bounced" against the upper roof of the world by a transmitting antenna of a new type, known as the horizontal Double -V, developed during the past year. This type of antenna is designed particularly to project "sky-waves," as distinguished from "ground waves," since sky-waves are the type of short waves needed to transmit over long distances.

The transmitting station for the Hawaiian service is at Dixon, California, 20 miles southwest of Sacramento. The receiving station is at Point Reyes, 35 miles north of San Francisco.

Simplicity and compactness mark the new type antennas for Dixon and Point Reyes. These antennas, developed by the Bell Telephone laboratories in New York, are diamond-shaped. The arrangement of the wires makes them highly directional; that is, they are pointed directly to Hawaii. This results in great power economy.

The diamond at Dixon is formed by two copper wires mounted on eight 70-foot poles. The diamond is about 500 feet long and 250 feet wide. The antenna is "aimed" at the receiving station in Hawaii by placing the two end poles in a line. If this line were extended westward, following the earth's curve, it would pass through the Hawaiian station.

At the western end of the antenna is a system of 1200 feet of iron wire looped back and forth on a line of four 20-foot poles. The resistance of the iron wire causes the eastern waves to die out. The shape of the antenna prevents northern and southern radiations. This Double-V antenna system is thus un-directional; that is, transmitting in only one direction.

The receiving antenna at Point Reyes is a diamond formed by a single copper wire, mounted on poles. This antenna, due to its shape, is sensitive only to voice waves traveling along the line passing through its two end poles and has a system of wire to cause voice waves received from the eastward to die out, making the system wholly uni-directional.

The "sky-waves" leave the antenna at an angle of from 10 to 30 degrees above the horizontal. The "heavi-side layer" which they strike, reflects them to Koko Head. This is a layer of ionized gases estimated to be about 200 miles above the earth, varying during the day and seasons.

The Dixon transmitting station has a maximum power while transmitting the voice of 20,000 watts. It will use several frequencies between 7,000 and 21,000 kilocycles, corresponding to a range of 40 to 14 meters respectively. Should a wave length less than 12 meters be used, the "sky-waves" would not be reflected by the "heavi-side layer" but would pass through it.

The average person owning a radio receiving set, will be able to grasp the size and action of these great transpacific stations from these facts:

The largest vacuum tubes are double-ended and two feet long.

Eight such tubes are used, each of 10,000 watts, compared with about 5 watts in the average home receiving set.

These eight tubes are supplied with 10,000 volts in direct current by a rectifier containing six large, single-ended, water-cooled tubes, which step up the 2300 volts of alternating current to 10,000 volts.

Other tubes used are of 5, 50, 75 and 250 watts, and with the other two large tubes, amplify the voice millions of times.

The condenser plates in the final tuning stage of tuning the transmitter are 14 inches in diameter and 3-8 inch thick, compared with a three inch diameter and 1-100 inch thickness in the average home set.

The transmitter is 4 by 18 by 7 feet.

The receiver is 8 by 7 feet.

San Francisco will be the control point for all North American calls through the transpacific stations. Control boards, with monitoring attendants, will be located in the Grant avenue long distance office of The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, which will handle all transpacific calls over its lines. The transpacific calls will pass through the same switchboard, with the same operators now employed in handling northern California's transcontinental and transoceanic calls to Europe, Asia, Australia, and South America.

PLEASANTON HIGH SCHOOL PAPER DRIVE SUCCESSFUL

Freshmen and Seniors Beat Sophomores and Juniors in Contest

The paper drive at the Amador Valley high school, at Pleasanton, two weeks ago, was successful.

The pupils showed a great deal of enthusiasm towards the end of the drive. The juniors challenged the seniors, and the freshmen challenged the sophomores to a contest.

The freshmen gathered more papers than all the rest of the school put together. When the drive was over, the seniors had 1,446 pounds; the juniors, 991; the sophomores, 1,476; and the freshmen, 4,016.

As losers in their respective contests, the juniors and sophomores will give the seniors and freshmen a party in the near future.

Hardy Damage Suit To Start in Oakland Court on January 4

School Confident of Obtaining Favorable Judgement at Trial

January 4 has been set for the opening of the trial of the damage suit being brought against the Amador Valley high school, at Pleasanton, by Wilbur Hardy, of Sunol.

Hardy is suing the school for $5,327.70 as damages for the loss of one finger and permanent injury to three others when his hand was caught in a power saw at the Pleasanton high school.

Hardy was a student in the school at the time of the accident, but has since graduated. Being a first year student of the manual training class at the time, the school claims Hardy was instructed not to use the power saw. Several students of the class can substantiate this claim, school authorities assert.

The student, on the other hand, claims he had never been warned against using the saw.

Although in a similar case tried recently against the Livermore high school, damages were awarded to the plaintiff, Amador authorities consider that the school has a good chance of receiving a judgement in its favor when the case comes to trial. They base this belief mainly on the facts that in the Amador accident the instructor was in the classroom at the time' and that it can be proved the boy was instructed not to use the power saw. In the Livermore case the teacher was out of the room when the student was hurt.

Deputy District Attorney James Oakley will represent the school in the litigation, while a firm of San Francisco attorneys will handle Hardy's interests. The trial will take place in an Oakland court.

HOLDUP STOPPED WHEN GARAGEMAN TURNS TABLES

Thug Captured by Victim and Turned Over to Constable

By not doing a thorough job an attempted holdup in Dublin failed December 21. As a result Robert Gray was arraigned before Judge Charles A. Gale of Pleasanton Tuesday morning and preliminary hearing set for this week. The charge was "assault with intent to commit theft."

Gray and a companion drove up to the Dublin garage about midnight last Monday and ordered the attendant, to put some oil in the car. Gray got out while his companion remained seated at the wheel.

As Lambert leaned over to draw the oil from a barrel, Gray hit him across the back of the head with a metal-loaded leather blackjack. He failed to knock Lambert senseless as he thought, and the garageman, unnoticed, drew a gun and backed Gray against the wall with his hands above his head.

The man in the car, seeing the suddden reversal of fortunes, made a clean escape in the car.

Constable Al Vervais, Pleasanton officer, was called and conducted the prisoner to the Pleasanton jail, where he was held until his appearance in court.

POOR SHOOTING LOSES GAME FOR AMADOR B TEAM

Amador B. team, of Pleasanton, was defeated by the Crockett five with a score of 16 to 6 in a tussle held last Friday evening at the Pleasanton high school.

The Amador B Cagers, with the exception of Muggs George, played a poor game in shooting. They had the ball in their hands and threatened their opponents many times but were not able to sink the basket. Muggs George, forward, played a remarkable game, scoring five of Amador's six points. Kelleher, of the Crockett team, was the high point man for the game, with eight to his credit. John Haas scored the other point for the Dons.

The offensive and defensive work of the B squad showed that they have many future possibilities of turning a good team. They were continually threatening the Crockett players but due to the poorest type of shooting their excellent floor work was robbed of its effectiveness.

The lineup for the Dons was Bottini and Safreno, forwards; Muggs George, center; Gibson and Haas, guards.

SCHOOL CHILDREN ARE VACCINATED AT PLEASANTON

Date Set Will Give Pupils Three Weeks To Recover

Vaccination of all pre-school and school children of the Antone, Dublin, Sunol, and Pleasanton schools was held at the Pleasanton grammar school beginning two weeks ago.

Vaccination for smallpox and diphtheria was given to all of the school children who have not had it done before by the health doctors.

The time selected for the vaccination made it very convenient for the school district and the children, because the pupils will have three weeks to recover from the effects of the shots and will not have to be taken from their studies.

Henri's Patience Was Finally Rewarded

By LEETE STONE

HENRI and Fleurette were so very much in love with each other—but marriage; a little home—ah! How to accomplish it? Often as they sat on their favorite bench atop Montmatre looking up at the blue, star-studded sky; a glimmering background for the Oriental Minarets of the Church of Sacre Coeur, Henri was very sad and of doleful expression. Fleurette it was who always cheered him up and devoted herself to the bright side of life.

"But, my Henri," she softly whispered one evening, "like all men, you are impatient! What matter that I am an orphan with no parents to give me a dot and a blessing? What matter that your pay is too little as yet for marriage? We are young; we love each other. Can we not trust and wait and laugh over the lovely things that are ours at this moment? Behold, Henri! You may kiss me after you look . . . !"

Thus admonished and invited Henri revived at once with true Gallic elasticity of emotion. They kissed with the happy abandon of guileless youth.

"Fleurette, my treasure, as always you are right. I am ashamed of myself. But no more; my cherished! I swear it! I will work harder, save as always the ten francs a week. Why? Because I love you and I have the—what is it? Ah, the hunch! Some day the opportunity will arrive for you and me to go to America and astonish them all with our so perfect English."

And so it went day after day; week after week; and month after month with Fleurette and Henri—Fleurette supremely joyous in a French woman's love of love; Henri, adoring, worshipful; but more often than not impatiently despairing of that bridal day that spelled for him the worth of life itself.

So brushed by romance they were, that often they met by the damp, perfumed delight of the flower booths situated on the long aisle back of the Madeleine—a riot of roses with the dew still on them. And sometimes, of a Sunday afternoon, they strolled, hand in hand, shoulder touching shoulder, out of the Avenue des Champs Elysees, past Porte Maillot, into the mossy lichen Bois de Boulogne, circling over to Longhcamp.

In such ways the love of Henri and Fleurette grew to be a beautiful abiding quality of both their lives.

Henri was the concierge (grandiloquent title) of a diminutive inn with a cigar box size office and a complement of six rooms; all antiquated as the French revolution, but, due to Henri's omniscience, fairly shining from perpetual scouring. True, one had to run down to the rear courtyard to use the community wash basin—but when one considered the rate—four francs a day, sixteen cents, which included morning ocffee and a wee, shapely carafe of vin ordinaire. In other words, Henri was the arbiter of destiny for one of the manifold pensions that lie in that Paris which is tucked away behind the wide avenues and broad boulevards—the Paris of the true Parisian, and the Paris that but one of a thousand tourists ever glimpses.

Now to save enough to marry Fleurette and take her to America, where he knew he could, with his expert knowledge, make much money at one of the great hotels where cunning continental service was appreciated in terms of dollars!

Returning one day about one to his pension after a meager luncheon with Fleurette, he was as usual brooding mentally and peering into the misty future. Remember that the street in which Henri abided and won his scanty subsistence could be crossed from sidewalk to sidewalk in two fair strides of a six-foot man; the sidewalk would be exactly two and a half times the length of his shoe!

Implanting itself forcibly on Henri's vision, as he approached his pension, was the picture of a nurse-maid and baby carriage—the carriage jutting half way across the street—just this side of his destination. As he was almost beside the carriage. Voila! What was that careening recklessly down the more than narrow street? A taxicab! The driver's eyes everywhere but in front of him. Bearing down on the baby carriage! Mordieu! Henri leaped like an avalanche and grabbed. Back to the gray walls he held the carriage and its precious burden, close in, with a whimpering nurse-maid clawing his arm while the taxi snorted by.

The sequel! Ah, therein flourishes the sweet future of Fleurette and Henri. The baby so deftly rescued from destruction belonged to none other than Harlan Keith, owner of a chain of great hotels in that land of promise—America.

The scene! Harlan Keith's room in the Ritz—Henri announced and entering:

"Come in, young man!" Crisp, sharp command, as Harlan Keith blew his nose repeatedly on a silk handkerchief. "Minnie, our nurse-maid, has confided to me your confidence. My thanks would be invalid. I invite you—and your Fleurette, whom I shall see that you marry tomorrow—to come home with me and build your future with me in that much criticized republic—America!"

Narcissa Locked Her Brother Out

By JANE OSBORN

NARCISSA FENWICK was a person of rare enthusiasms. She had been keen about a wide variety of things. Once it was thoroughbred dogs, with strong emphasis on police dogs—though the only dog she had ever owned was a nondescript, dun-colored canine that had attached himself to their rambling old suburban house. She became a devotee of the art of Velasquez at one time, though all she could see of his work was from the imperfect reproductions in a few books from the circulating library. Now she was enthusiastic about the short stories of Morgan Dare. Strange enough when Morgan Dare laid his plots in mining and lumber camps, he[illegible] very little love interest and was regarded by his publishers as having no following among women readers. However, Narcissa honestly admired him. She read everything that Morgan Dare had ever published, and waited impatiently for his next production.

One morning at breakfast her older brother, Edward, happened to be drinking his coffee and eating his buttered toast at the same time that Narcissa was.

"Hello, Cis," commented the elder brother. "I met that Dare fellow last night—guest of honor at the club—ladies' night." Edward paused to drink coffee, and continued: "Odd having him come on ladies' night, too, because the ladies never read him. Fine chap, though."

"You mean Morgan Dare," Narcissa had been saying, and her blue eyes became almost black with energetic disappointment. "Why, I perfectly adore him. I eat him alive—I think you were contemptible not to ask me. And it was ladies' night, and you knew how very enthusiastic I am about Morgan Dare."

"Weren't any children there," commented Edward and then grinned while Narcissa reminded him haughtily that she was twenty. "Why, I mightn't ever have another chance to see him," she said.

Narcissa's eyes snapped fire. Edward knew the depth of her disappointment, though he perhaps did not count on the possibilities of her resentment.

The Fenwick household had been considerably depleted. Two of the brothers, an uncle and an older sister were away from home. Aunt Martha, who kept house, and the servants had rooms at the back of the house. Old Mr. Fenwick was quite deaf. So Narcissa's plan of revenge was bound to work well. Edward had called out to her as he left to tell Aunt Martha he wouldn't be home for dinner. It was then that Narcissa thought of her plan.

As the day advanced she noticed with regret that it would probably be unusually warm and balmy for May. She had hoped for a chill evening, with possible showers and perhaps a spattering of snow.

After her father had gone to his room that evening, after the servants were all in and after good Aunt Martha had gone the rounds to see that the windows were all securely locked and shutters on the downstairs windows all well bolted, Narcissa crept downstairs.

She surveyed the heavy old front door with close scrutiny. It had a special lock, a key to which the elder brother Edward carried. When he was to be out late the bolt was not drawn. Narcissa carefully drew this bolt and then turned another ancient lock at the top of the door. Then she stayed awake until midnight. She heard the late train draw into the station, waited fifteen minutes and then heard steps on the veranda. Edward had come home; he couldn't possibly get in. The garage was locked and he would have to stay out all night or walk to the village with meager chance of finding shelter there. Narcissa dropped off to sleep secure in her revenge. In the morning she would unbolt the door before anyone was up and not confess her guilt until after Edward had aired his grievance to the entire family.

That morning when she drew the lock she peered through the crescent aperture in one of the front shutters to see if her brother were on the front veranda. Instead of one man she saw two. One was asleep in a dilapidated hammock and another, the stranger, in a rickety steamer chair.

That morning she appeared at breakfast smiling serenely. Her revenge had worked better than she had hoped. Edward had apparently brought home a guest and had been put to the embarrassment of lodging on the front porch with him. Served him right. She hoped the guest was some one of importance so that Edward would be really embarrassed.

Edward greeted Narcissa with more than usual enthusiasm, both he and his guest rising as she entered.

"Here he is, Cis," he said. "This is Mr. Morgan Dare. I brought him out for the night, which we spent on the veranda."

There were rather embarrassed handshakings. "I told Mr. Dare how you admired his work, and he asked to meet you. You're the first woman he ever heard of that liked his writing."

So it was. Morgan Dare tarried two days, so charmed was he with the only girl who admired him. And when he went it was with his troth plighted to that of Narcissa Fenwick.

"Little Stories for Bedtime" by Thornton W. Burgess

A THUMP AND A SLAP

IT ALL sounds like a dreadful quarrel, doesn't it? But there wasn't any quarrel at all. You see it was this way: Peter Rabbit sitting on guard near the pond of Paddy the Beaver, where Honker the Goose and his eleven followers were sleeping, saw something moving among the Black Shadows which filled the Green Forest. "Hello! What is that moving over there?" thought Peter, but he was far too wise to think it out loud. He just thought it inside and kept stiller than ever, if that were possible. And all the time he looked very hard in the direction where he had seen, or thought he had seen, a something moving.

Once More He Sat Tight and Held His Breath While Granny and Reddy Fox Passed.

Sure enough in a minute or two he saw it again. He saw it steal across from one Black Shadow to another and he didn't need to be told what that something was nor who it was. Oh, no, Peter didn't need to be told. Peter had seen that shadowy form too often not to know it at the very first glimpse. It was Old Man Coyote. Peter felt little prickles of fear all over him.

"He knows I am over here and he's hunting for me," thought Peter. "Oh dear what shall I do? It is a long way to the nearest bramble-tangle and I don't know a single hollow log or hole any nearer. I wish I'd stayed at home. That's what I do—I wish I'd stayed at home."

He crouched down, making himself as small as possible under the thick branch of a low-growing hemlock tree, and stared out with eyes wide with fear. Nearer and nearer came Old Man Coyote. Peter sat tight. It was the safest thing to do. He just longed to run, but if he should do that Old Man Coyote would be after him in a flash and Pete knew how Old Man Coyote can run. So he sat tight, though it was the hardest kind of hard work. He held his breath. Old Man Coyote was so near that Peter was afraid he would hear the thumping of his heart. And then Peter gave a soft little sigh of relief. Old Man Coyote had passed without so much as a glance his way. In fact, Old Man Coyote was watching the pond of Paddy the Beaver, and his eyes fairly burned with eagerness. Silently, but swiftly, he stole along. He was making his way around to the other side of the pond. Then Peter understood. He was after one of those geese who, fast asleep, were drifting nearer and nearer to the other shore.

Peter was just trying to make up his mind what he ought to do when his wabbly little nose caught a familiar scent. Once more he sat tight, it was the safest thing to do. Granny and Reddy Fox passed. They, too, were stealing along very softly, with their eyes fixed on the pond. They made their way around the other end of the pond from the one Old Man Coyote had gone around.

Peter's heart went pit-a-pat, pit-a-pat with excitement. What should he do? What ought he to do? If he should thump and try to waken Honker and the other geese he would give himself away. Would he be able to reach the nearest bramble-tangle before Old Man Coyote or Reddy Fox could catch him? Perhaps those sleeping geese would not drift any nearer the shore and then they would be safe and he would not need to give warning. Perhaps they would not hear him even if he did thump and he would run all that dreadful risk for nothing. Anyway, there was no need of doing anything just yet.

So Peter watched. Little by little two or three of those sleeping forms drifted nearer and nearer to the other shore. By any by they were so near it that Peter knew that something must be done at once or it would be too late. Somewhere over there three pairs of hungry eyes were watching those geese just as he was. Peter made up his mind. He would thump, and then he would run with all his might.

Thump! Thump! Thump! Peter hit the ground with all his might and hoped it would waken Honker. Then without waiting to see he started for the nearest bramble-tangle as fast as he could go.

Slap! That was the tail of Paddy the Beaver hitting the water. He had heard Peter's thumps and knew what they meant. And at the sound of that slap Honker the Goose awoke.

Banking Conducting Continual Research

The American Bankers Association is daily submitting every phase and every department of banking to searching scrutiny and study, says John G. Lonsdale, president of this the world's greatest financial association. The findings of these investigations are made available to the 20,000 members of the organization for their guidance.

"It is a fine tribute to the spirit of cooperation among bankers that it is able to carry on this work," he says. "Bankers from one end of the country to the other are constantly giving freely and unselfishly of their skill and experience so that the association may produce the truly great results that are being accomplished."

Statistical information on national and state banks, savings institutions, trust companies and trust departments, clearing house groups and general banking is prepared after exhaustive inquiry and distributed for the use of all bankers. The organization's investigations have resulted in the passage of beneficial legislation, revision of banking practices and innumerable changes for a stronger and more efficient banking structure. It has set up an educational system through its affiliated American Institute of Banking, where 45,000 ambitious young bank men and women are now availing themselves of the opportunity to advance in the banking field.

"It has been well said that the American Bankers Association, exclusive of the Federal Reserve System, has been the greatest single nation-wide source of stability and improved conditions for banking in the United States," Mr. Lonsdale says.

Joan Acted a Bit Too Quick

By RUBY GRUBER

JOAN slid her high geared sports roadster into motion, and swinging out into the fast moving traffic up Michigan boulevard, gave vent to her enraged feelings by passing car after car.

The beauty of Lake Michigan so lazily lapping the shore, the bright bathing suits dotting the beach, passed unseen by Joan. A secluded driveway farther up the lake brought only painful memories. She turned her pretty head as she neared the shady lane, her chin set in determination not to give way to tears. He had parked there one afternoon, told her his ambitions, and he also told her she was the most beautiful girl he had ever met.

Jack Brandon had seemed so nice. It was true she had only known him a week, but Joan was beginning to think about the tall, good-looking Jack far more than she had thought about any one else. He worked in the law office of the village attorney, and was rich in his own right. Not that it made any difference to Joan. He had seemed so eager, so refreshing, and so real compared with the shallow social men in her own crowd. He had "rushed" her at breath-taking speed, with phone calls, a show and dinner. Then the luncheon for today was his suggestion, as they sat in the soft moonlight of the Country club last night. Joan had arrived on the exact minute, happily anxious to see this man who had crept into her heart.

But Jack did not come. Joan waited fully thirty minutes, seated at the little table cozily hidden away from the world by two huge palms. They had dined there once before—it seemed ages ago, but in reality it was only last Monday. He had held her hand and gazed into her eyes, then shyly raised her white palm to his lips and kissed it almost reverently. Today . . . he had not even come to meet her!

Joan's eyes filled with tears as she allowed her troubled thoughts to vision again the pitcure she saw as she came out of the tearoom. Jack was getting into a taxicab with a girl!

Almost numbed with surprise, Joan got into her car. As she now swung the car into the driveway of her home, she hoped that her mother's bridge party had not yet begun. Joan felt very much like crying and wanted to get to her own room. But luck was against her, the bridge party was beginning.

She stood in the hall. The wide archway to her right showed the bridge tables surrounded by well-groomed, well-fed, happy matrons. Her tall, stately mother moved gracefully from one table to another.

"Perkins," Joan called softly to the butler.

"Yes, Miss," the submissive Perkins answered.

"Any phone calls for me?" she asked anxiously.

"Not any, Miss," Perkins answered.

"Thanks," she started up the stairs. Her only hope had been that Jack had phoned at the last moment. The young girl might have been his sister or some relative.

She would call his office. Softly she tiptoed down the stairs to the telephone, and gave the operator the number.

"Will you connect me with Mr. Brandon's office, please," she asked the girl who answered.

"Mr. Brandon is out for the afternoon. You wish to leave a message?"

"No, thanks, no message," Joan hung up the receiver.

Now, to get to her room! She could not bear the thought of going in among all those chattering women. As she gained the foot of the stairs, her mother came through the doorway.

"Joan, I am so glad you came! Mrs. Granfred telephoned at the last minute. The baby is feverish, and she hated to leave him alone with the nurse. You must fill in."

"Yes, mother," Joan answered. After all, what did it matter what she did? Playing bridge would keep her occupied, and she could have that cry later.

The afternoon passed slowly to the girl. But, as all things will do, the bridge party finally ended.

After the last of the guests were gone Joan went to he rroom.

"Marie—I will not be at home to Mr. Jack Brandon at any time," Joan spoke to the maid. "You will please tell Perkins."

"Yes, Miss Joan," the maid answered. "These flowers came right after you left for town, and I laid the note on your desk." The maid turned to the large bunch of roses crowded together in a wide vase.

"They are lovely—" Joan put her face against the fragrant petals.

Then she picked up the note.

"Joan dear:

Sorry I cannot meet you, but we just located a witness to the Taylor murder. I am taking her over to the jail, to look over a few suspects we have under lock and key. Know you will understand and see me tonight!

All my love.

Jack."

Slowly Joan folded the letter, and with a smile she turned to the maid.

"I will see Mr. Brandon when he calls." She smiled happily.

"Yes, Miss Joan," the maid answered listlessly.

POULTRY

EGG PRODUCTION DURING SUMMER

Poultry Men Agree That It Depends on Best Care.

Facing poultry men during the summer is the problem of preventing a rapid drop in egg production with the coming of warm weather, when eggs bring good prices. Standard egg production in New Jersey for June is 18 eggs per bird, for July it is 16 eggs, and for August, 13 eggs. Whether or not a flock makes standard production during these three months depends entirely upon the care it is given by the poultry man, announces the poultry department of the New Jersey agricultural experiment station.

According to the station, successful poultry men agree that good summer egg production depends on attention to little details of management and not on one outstanding factor. Culling the flock, for example, is not the most important factor in obtaining standard production, but just one of the many factors. In fact, culling should be last in the effort to hold production.

The laying house should receive attention first, as a means of holding egg production. All windows should be opened to provide good ventilation and to keep the house cool.

Lice and mites are often the cause of the flock falling off in production. Careful inspection of the birds and coop should be made once a month for these parasites. It is considered a good practice to treat the flock for body lice by using sodium fluoride or any lice powder. Generally, one treatment is sufficient for the entire summer. The roost, drop-boards, and nests should be painted with any coal tar product as a means of controlling the mites. When such cannot be obtained, a mixture of kerosene oil and old crank case oil from the tractor or automobile can be used to advantage.

Heavy consumption of mash, so important to heavy production, is obtained in the summer by feeding only 8 or 10 pounds of grain to each 100 birds; keeping mash always before the birds; and keeping the layers confined to the house where they will always be near the mash hoppers.

Other factors found to be important in feeding are: a daily supply of fresh green feed such as dandelions, lawn clippings and weeds from the garden; and a constant supply of fresh, clean cool water.

When production falls below 50 per cent, it is time to start culling, if the foregoing factors mentioned have been carefully followed.

Old Frankfurt

Few cities with the trend of modern progress driving them so hard can have preserved so completely the ancient streets and buildings of their old beginnings as has Frankfurt in Germany. Frankfurt has kept almost intact the Fourteenth-century houses, guild houses, chapels and cloisters much as they were built. Round the cathedral whole blocks of old buildings have been swept away, leaving that fine old structure unencumbered, but the perfect square of the "Romerberg" remains.

Tailoring to the INDIVIDUAL

Clothes of Character

SUCCESSFUL business men no longer consider hand-tailoring an unnecessary or expensive refinement. Compare the fine differences in appearance and fit of suits made definitely for YOU and not to the mold of a million others. There's character to tailored clothes—personality — comfort, lasting newness, and wearability. Well tailored clothes have style and distinction — successful men have learned to insist upon, for they realize it costs no more. A suit here will cost as little as you paid for a ready-made last year—it will render twice the pleasure.

LARGE SUM TO BE SPENT BY COUNTY FOR POOR RELIEF

$451,000 Already Used By Supervisors In Six Months

That Alameda county is doing its best to provide relief for its indigents was revealed last week when figures made public by the board of supervisors showed that $451,000 has been spent in less than six months of the current fiscal year, and total of more than $1,000,000 is expected to be spent for indigent relief before next June 30.

Appropriation of $540,000 for "outside care of indigents" was provided for when the budget for the current year was adopted. This included expenditures for such items as grocery orders, purchases of fuel and similar relief carried on for the county through various contractual agencies and organizations.

Up to December 24, appropriations and expenditures for the five supervisorial districts were as follows:

District No. 1, Supervisor Ralph Richmond; $20,000 appropriated and $13,000 spent.

District No. 2, Supervisor Charles W. Heyer, $200,000 appropriated and $[illegible],000 spent.

District No. 3, Supervisor W. J. Hamilton; $110,000 appropriated and $86,000 spent.

District No. 5, Supervisor W. M. Davis; $110,000 appropriated and $95,000 spent.

ers and farmers were finding difficulty in keeping the water from flooding their homes, and transportation facilities were greatly hampered due to the flooded condition. Much land in the vicinity of Irvington also was under water.

Despite temporary disadvantages of the heavy rains, the bounteous precipatation is being greeted with joy by farmers and others. It will assure an abundant water supply for next spring and summer irrigation purposes. Wells throughout Washington township are showing a rising water level, which is a source of pleasure to Alameda County Water District officials. After the water has been flowing for a week or more the wells below the fault line can be expected to also show a marked improvement in the water level.

Niles Civic Head Explains Situation In Regard to Road

Expect House Numbering Within the Next Two Weeks

* * * * * * * * *

Further action on the extension of Niles Main street through the California Nursery property can be expected as soon as property owners who have already donated land along the proposed road have signed deeds to the property contributed, it was announced by F. V. Jones, president of the Niles Chamber of Commerce, at their last meeting of this year held Tuesday noon.

In presenting a brief review of the road question, Jones explained it had been decided by the district attorney's office that it would be necessary to get deed signatures from all the property owners who had contributed property along the road before court action could be taken to complete the extension to its proposed junction with the Alvarado road.

These deeds have been in the hands of county surveyor and have been sent to the property owners, and the signatures are now coming in, according to President Jones. When all the signatures have been obtained, court action can then follow.

Work on widening Niles Main street in the postoffice block probably will begin very soon, it was indicated at Tuesday's gathering when A. J. Petsche announced that plans for the work had been sent in to John O. Skeggs, district highway engineer, and needed only his approval before the highway department commences on the project. Completion of this work will result in a vast improvement to Niles main thoroughfare, as traffic conditions will be greatly facilitated at a point where a hazardous situation exists at present.

Progress is being made in the plans for the numbering of Niles houses and buildings and the erection of new street signs, stated J. A. Silva, chairman of the house numbering committee. Silva said he expected to present a full report at next week's meeting in which would be contained information as to what numbers have been given to various individuals and concerns, where to get the numbers, and where to place them. Thus Niles people can look forward to having their houses numbered within the next two weeks or so.

Since Tuesday was the last gathering of the year for the Niles civic body, President Jones commended the work performed by the various chamber committees throughout the year. He lauded the members for the enthusiasm and zeal displayed in pursuit of the duties assigned them, and assured the assemblage that the Niles Chamber of Commerce had enjoyed a successful year, with many civic accomplishments to their credit.

In closing, Lester Duffey, former head of the Niles commercial body, also paid a few words of tribute to the chamber, calling attention to the fact that since the group was reorganized in 1921 it has not missed holding a single meeting. In comparison with other civic bodies in Washington township, this is a record of which the Niles members can well be proud, he added. Duffey also extolled the work which has been accomplished by the organization in the last ten years.

George Bonde was appointed chairman of the committee to arrange for next week's meeting.
